Can you predict which sets retire when?

Question

So I've found myself ordering a lot of sets lately. As a student, that isn't really a habit I can financially support for very long. A huge part of it is FOMO. I've had to watch many sets that I'd "love to buy for myself someday" be retired before I had the chance. Now, because I fear I'll otherwise be too late, buy a lot more. I think knowing when something expires, and realizing that I usually have a lot more time than I realize, will help me space my purchases out a little. So, is there any way to know what sets are retiring?

No need to predict. There's a master list you can refer to:

If you're wondering about its accuracy, the info is pulled directly from the Lego site. Each Lego item site info has an end date, and so far that's been accurate in determining when something retires. Sometimes Lego will change the date depending

Oh man, this document is a LIFEsaver. Finding out my wishlist sets aren't retiring until December is a massive relief. And my biggest wished one has even longer! Thanks man, helps a lot. If I could've I'd give you some gold.

This site is so good especially for someone like me who's getting into Legos "late" so I can prioritize my wish list.
